Camtasia 8 can be downloaded here. What this tutorial will show you how to do is add a camera to your Windows 10 desktop and then record a screen recording. Since Windows 10 was released, a new feature was introduced. If you have a Windows 10 computer, you can now record a screencast using the built in feature. To capture a screencast, you just click the “Start Screencast” button. This is a great feature, but you can’t do this if you are running a 32-bit version of Windows 10. Camtasia 8 is the only solution I know of to capture a screen recording and you can install and run it on any Windows 10 machine. This is a step-by-step tutorial to show you how to install and run Camtasia 8 on a Windows 10 computer. I’ll also teach you how to get a Windows 10 machine online to show you the screen capture options. Checking your version of Windows The first thing you need to do is to make sure you are running a 64 bit version of Windows. You can use the following command to check the Windows version you have installed: > wmic os get version If you get an error with the following command, you are not running the right version of Windows. The output of this command should show your version of Windows: The number under Version is the version of Windows 10 you are running. In this example I am running Windows 10 build 15063. If your version is lower than 15063, you will need to update to a newer version of Windows. Installing Camtasia 8 Next, you need to get Camtasia 8 installed. Camtasia 8 is available for download from the website listed above. Make sure you are installing the 32 bit version of Camtasia 8. If you are not sure, download the 64 bit version and make sure the version number at the end is 8.0. When installing Camtasia 8, it will ask you if you want to add it to the Microsoft Store. It is safe to install from the Microsoft Store, but I would install it manually if you like. Once you have installed Camtasia 8, you need to run it to make sure it is working. Click the start button, then type camtasia in the search box and hit enter. If it 82157476af
